RESEARCH PREMISE AND RESEARCH METHODOLOGY
26-02-2024 to 01-03-2024

PREAMBLE

A Research Premise is the foundation upon which a researcher's methodology is built. It influences the specific methods that a researcher uses. Research methodology provides the right direction for research and establishes the focus and helps in identifying relevant findings to the research question, through appropriate data collection methods, sampling techniques, data analysis procedures, and framework for interpreting findings.

The main Objective of this FDP is to develop a clear understanding of how each premise defines the methodology to be adopted and deliberate on comparative study of doctoral researchers and their unique methodology adopted.

The programme is intended for in general to all the faculty who have research orientation and specific to teachers and researchers who have been perusing doctoral research and are required to understand the technical aspects of Research methodology design.

KEY TAKEAWAYS FROM PROGRAM

Participants will be able to understand thoroughly :
- Various Premises in Architectural Research,
- Intricacies involved in framing up research methodology design.
- Methodology design frame work

NOTES

- Teachers/ architects who wish to register for the training program either under Collaborative Training Program (CTP 2022-23) or as independent individuals may do so by filling up the Google form available on the given link.
- To confirm registration, kindly upload proof of payment towards the registration fees /nomination form on college letterhead before submitting the registration form.
- Link to join the program will be shared one day prior to the program
- This program is not for students.
- E-Certificate of said training program shall be sent via email on registered email id of participants, after successful completion of training program by participant i.e. attending all sessions and submitting all assignments, EOPT and feedback form of training program.
