About FDP

What is history? How does one engage with 'History' in the discipline of the built environment? A paradigm shift is required in the pedagogy of built environment, where history is understood from new lenses while questioning the not so contextually relevant tools. It is also essential to thoughtfully unlearn the biases of non-Indian systems in interpreting Indian history in the built environment discipline. Attempts are required to understand the Indian traditional knowledge systems and their relevance in architecture pedagogy.

Key Take-aways

Be able to understand and identify the relevance of 'History' in architecture pedagogy.

Be able to analyze and develop innovative tools to engage with the teaching and learning of history in the field of the built environment.

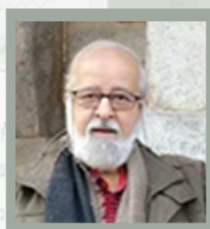

To intrigue the idea of a career through teaching history in Architecture and establishing skills in pedagogy.
