"REDEFINING SKYSCRAPERS: EXPLORING ADVANCED SYSTEMS IN TALL BUILDING DESIGN"

15th to 19th January 2024 - 10:30am to 1:45pm (IST)
Last date of registration: 12th January 2024

PREAMBLE

In academia, the instruction on tall building systems tends to be predominantly theoretical. It is important to shift the focus towards integrating discussions and practical applications of challenges related to these systems into the design process. Often, both students and educators lack awareness of the real-world design challenges and constraints associated with tall buildings.The objective of this TRC is to understand in practice, how the design of tall building systems is heavily oriented towards specific project requirements.

Teachers can incorporate their learnings from a tall buildings workshop by infusing real-world examples, practical insights, and interdisciplinary perspectives into their lectures, enriching the educational experience for their students.

KEY TAKEAWAYS FROM PARTICIPANTS

1. Comprehensive understanding of the complexities and considerations involved in designing, constructing and managing tall structures.
2. Multidisciplinary Knowledge in Design, structural system and Engineering
